Sarah Anne's COOKING CLASS

Waste may be avoided by using left-over foods. Many of us have worked out recipes that are even more delicious than when the food is first cooked.

Be sure your left-over dish is palatable and does not have a warmed over taste.

Ham Hashed Peppers

6 green peppers
1 ¼ cups minced cooked ham
1 ½ cups cold cooked potatoes
1 peeled small onion, minced
1 ¼ tablespoons minced parsley
2 strips bacon
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
6 tablespoons water
Pepper

Cut, seed and boil the peppers for 3 minutes. Mix the ham with the potatoes and onion. Add the minced parsley and saute until well heated but not browned in the bacon fat left after cooking the bacon. Add the remaining ingredients. Stuff the pepper shells generously, and bake in an oven (450 degrees) for 15 minutes. A little melted butter on top of the hash will aid the browning.

Caramel Finger

Roll left-over pie dough thin, cut in strips 3 inches wide, spread with soft butter and brush with warm caramel. Place one strip on top of another and bake in a hot oven until brown.

A Nation's Worship

Lesson for September 4, 1955

IT WOULD be very nice to wake up some Sunday morning and find that everybody in America had decided to join our church. Suppose that up to now you had belonged to the First Universal Church of All Angels, and there was only one congregation of that denomination in your town, along with maybe six or eight other denominations. But suppose that on this Sunday morning as you walked to church you would find the Universal-Church-of-All-Angels sign on every church building you passed. Suppose you learned by the morning paper that this was because the President of the United States (himself a prominent member of your denomination) had issued a Directive ordering all churches to come over into this one — or be abolished entirely. Well, you would know that was a dream . . . because this is free America, and there is not and constitutionally can never be an official, government-supported, national, established religion.

Dr. Foreman

The Nucleus

So when we talk of "a nation's worship" in America we can't mean what we would mean in a country where everybody is drafgooned into one single kind of church, a country where to be born into the nation is to be born into the church at the same time. Still, there is sense in talking about the nation at worship, for take us by and large, we do worship; the church is too prominent an object in every landscape to be overlooked. And even in free America where church and state are separate, we can learn something from the ancient Hebrews who combined church and state in one. The first thing we learn is not to be discouraged by the fact that many people don't go to church at all. The whole story of Ezra and Nehemiah, the prophecies of Haggai and of Zechariah, show us that there were great masses of indifferent people in Judea after the "Return" and the restoration of the worship at the high altar in Jerusalem. There were the same difficulties with a building program that we have; preaching fell on many a deaf ear, just like now. Worship is now, and has always been, carried on, in the true sense, not by the masses but by a nucleus of devoted men and women.

The Opposition

The Jews who returned to Palestine to get their religion organized and under way again, with public services and all, found out another thing which we Americans might as well learn,—indeed, we have learned it. That is, not only is there indifference to religion, but it has many enemies. It is nothing but prettified nonsense to suppose that everybody in the world means well, that we all desire the welfare of society. It is contrary to the facts to believe that even those who do not worship with us and will not join us nevertheless wish us well. Don't deceive yourself. There are in America, as there are everywhere, people who are "plain mean." There are businesses that injured people, businesses that contribute to crime, indeed some businesses that even a not-too-moral police force labels as crime. Those who live by the profits of these enterprises just hate the church; let's face it.

Can Government Help?

Now in ancient Palestine, say Zechariah's time, not to mention earlier times, church and state helped and supported each other. King and high priest might even be related. Especially after the Exile, church and state became practically one. In our free America—and we would not wish it unfree, for a moment—can the government do anything to help the church? Readers who belong to Sunday school classes can start a very interesting discussion by asking that question. How can Government help the church? Ought Government to try to help us? One way, surely, by which the State can aid the church, is by laws which will keep the Lord's Day free, so far as possible, from work-day necessities. Another way is by setting an example. When leaders in government set an example of sharing in the public and private worship of God, the nation is all the better for it.

FARM AND HOME NEWS

The 1955 Virginia Water Systems Contests are being sponsored by the Virginia Farm Electrification Council in cooperation with several water pump manufacturers and distributors. The idea of the contest is to complete in 50 words or less one of the following statements: "Our pressure water system helps us because——," or "We need a pressure water system because —— ."

The eligibility rules are very simple, being only three. First, you must be 12 years of age or older; second, you must live beyond a city water main; third, you must live in Virginia.

Prizes are: first, $250; second $100; third, $75; and eight additional prizes of $25 each, all awards being in the form of U. S. Savings Bonds.

Entry blanks for the contest are available from the county agent's office, vocational agricultural teacher, or electric power supplier. Entries must be mailed before midnight, October 15, to: Water Systems, Blacksburg, Va.

Entries will be judged on originality, sincerity, aptness of thought, clarity and neatness. The decision of the judges will be final, and all entries will become the property of the Virginia Farm Electrification Council.

Plant Diseases

We have discovered this year in Virginia that several new diseases have been found for the first time, at least reported for the first time, as they may have been present here in the state for a number of years.

S. B. Fenne, plant pathologist at V. P. I., says that he has found sneck rot of potato in Page County. This disease has not been previously reported in Virginia and apparently has been recognized only a few times in the United States. The diseased potatoes from Page County had symptoms similar to those of cold injury.

Downy mildew of small grains was found in Henrico. One 27-acre of river bottom land, which is subject to spring floods, and which was sown with a mixture of wheat, oats, and barley, was found infested this year. It is estimated that 40% of the grain was destroyed.

A field of Wong barley being produced on new land in Bedford County contained patches of plants showing leaf spotting unlike any previously seen by plant pathologists at the college.

Two new tree diseases, one yellow blister of Lombardy poplar, and need rust of loblolly pine, were found in Montgomery and Augusta Counties, respectively. The fungus previously had been reported in New Jersey and Georgia.

Corn stalk rot was reported in Mathews County, affecting two recommended hybrids. No estimate there has been made as to the damage. This disease is also known to be in Arlington, Dinwiddie, Nelson and Northampton Counties.

Hormone For Lambs

Many Appomattox County Lamb producers have been reading in farm publications of hormone pellets for fattening lambs while on pasture. This method of fattening lambs was tested at Blacksburg this year. Results there differ somewhat with results elsewhere. It is found after one year's testing that the use of pellets did no good at all and they actually can be harmful. These lambs were, of course, creep-fed until turned on pasture around April 15. No supplementary feed was given while on pasture.

Mr. Wilkinson was in charge of this test. He found that lambs not receiving the pellet gave an overall return of $20.63. On the treated group the return was only $15.94. The difference was largely due to losses by death.

In general the treated lambs had carcass grades about 1/3 lower and less edible meat. Average live grade for all lambs was choice. Treatment had no significant effect on daily gain, regardless of weight at the time of implanting the pellet. However, again next year the tests will continue, using smaller doses and less compounds. Dr. Wilkinson theorizes that the deaths may have been caused because the hormone activity furnished by the pellets, combined with that possibly furnished by the pastures, may have been too great. Until a profitable dose can be worked out for Virginia, sheep men in Appomattox County are advised not to use this hormone when feeding lambs on pasture.

Bulk Tanks

Whenever talking with dairymen the question always arises as to whether or not it is profitable to install a bulk tank on the individual's dairy farm. There are many possible answers that may be given. One of the questions always coming up is what size tank does a dairy farm need? This will depend, of course, on the herd size, pick-up schedule and the expected dairy herd increase of the next few years. The only way that we can answer that question is to say that you buy one that is big enough to hold three milkings during the flush season when there is an everyday pick-up. When milk is hauled every other day, this tank should hold five milkings. There are a number of different bulk tanks on the market. However, the two main types are ice-bank tanks and direct expansion tanks.

There is some difference in the method of cooling and desirability and efficient use of the two type tanks. Briefly, the story is that the ice-bank tanks use ice water for cooling. The refrigerating coils freeze a bank of ice which keeps the cooling water near 32 degrees.

The cold water sprays against the sides and ends of the milk tank. Some tanks of this type are cooled only on three sides, while others are cooled on all sides.

This type tank will move the heat in the milk house over a relatively long period of time, that makes a more even milk house temperature than a direct expansion cooler. However, in direct expansion cooler the refrigerator coils are installed tight against the wall of the milk tank. The milk cools when it comes in contact with the cold wall. The direct expansion usually costs more but is cheaper to operate over the long pull. This type tank delivers all of the heat out of the milk into the milk house in a short period of tibe. Regardless of which system, however, you are using, you should have a milk house that is well ventilated, as high milk house temperatures will increase the cost of operation.

FAILS TO CATCH BOY

Louisville, Ky.- Mrs. Ilene Cook and her brother, Jimmy Payton, 18, were standing outside their apartment talking, when a toy pistol fell at their feet. Looking up, they saw a child's legs dangling over the roof edge. Just then the child, William Nevitt, 22-months old, fell. Payton reached out to catch him, but the child slid through Payton's arms and struck the concrete pavement, seriously injuring him.

ADDS TO CONGREGATION

Goldsboro, N. C.- When a small dog ran up and began to bark and snap at his pants cuff, a Goldsboro minister scolded the animal, told him he was the meanest dog he had ever seen and suggested that he needed to go to church. To the minister's surprise, the next Sunday morning, the little dog trotted down the aisle. He paused briefly, turned around and jogged out of the church. What effect the church visit had on his disposition, we have not heard.

SNAKES IN PAIRS

Bloomsburg, Pa.- Proving the saying that rattlesnakes come "in pairs," Mrs. Ario Sweppenheiser killed a 35-inch rattlesnake in her backyard with a shovel. Still somewhat shaken by the experience, she started out her back door only to find a bigger rattler coiled on the back doorsteps. Carl Hunsinger, a neighbor, shot it. This one measured 40 inches.

BURIED IN WEDDING DRESS

Glendale, Calif.- Susan Ball, beautiful actress, who recently died of cancer, just a year after her marriage to actor Richard Long, was buried in her wedding dress. Dr. Louis H. She taught us what it was like to wear the body like a loose garment. It never constricted her soul nor strangled her spirit."

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Salt reduction in the diet will not result in any permanent loss of weight. The kind of self-imposed salt - restricted diet that is possible for a person to undertake at home can be quite dangerous if not done so under a doctor's care.

If an amateur reduces his salt intake over a long period of time, trying to lose weight, then runs into trouble such as a severe injury, major surgery or a heat spell with excessive sweating, he will find himself in serious trouble. He develops symptoms of a salt deficiency.

The symptoms of salt deficiency may appear in salt-restricted patients under medical care. The symptoms range from fatigue to prostration. This is the result of the loss of extracellular fluid and disturbances of potassium balance, kidney function and nitrogen balance. These are part of the risks run by the patient. Another danger is edema.

However, under the doctor's care the patient has the doctor's knowledge as a safeguard.

If you want to lose weight, unless your doctor has told you otherwise, the only way to accomplish this is to cut down on your food intake. Remember, salt does not cause obisity. It has no caloric value.

Waco, Texas.- The Barbecue at Henry Pittes' place the other day really got hot—not with pepper—but with fire. It was all burned up.
